Workshop on 3-4 July 2014

Coping with Risk in Transnational Financial Markets

University of Oldenburg, Germany

Modern societies are increasingly formed by social, economic and legal relations that dissolve the traditional boundaries of nation states. Markets have outgrown systems of national regulation and international policy coordination. Transnational corporations and other cross-border organizations and networks interact in new patterns and set new standards of governance. In this context, the aim of the workshop is to bring together researchers from the areas of economics, finance, business studies and law working on transnational issues to discuss their current research. In particular, we invite submissions of unpublished theoretical, empirical and applied papers on aspects of risk and uncertainty in transnational financial markets. Submissions by senior academics interested in collaboration with ZenTra staff are particularly welcome. Topics of interest include, but are not limited to:

- risk management within and among transnational companies
- the role of financial intermediaries, such as financial analysts, credit rating agencies or clearing houses, in transnational financial markets
- transnational governance: private ordering and co-regulation in financial markets
- financial market stability and regulation
- effects of transnationalization on monetary policy transmission

The two-day workshop will feature both invited presentations and peer-reviewed contributions. We plan on having a single track of 12-14 presentations. The format of the workshop will leave ample time for discussion and interaction among the participants.

Submission deadline: 31 March 2014

Notification of acceptance: by 21 April 2014

Authors' registration deadline (for inclusion in the workshop programme): 15 May 2014

Please submit your paper to risk2014@zen-tra.de. All papers will be reviewed. Authors of accepted contributions are expected to attend the entire workshop. www.zen-tra.de/risk2014/

About ZenTra

ZenTra, the Center for Transnational Studies, is a research incubator where professors and senior staff from Germany's Northwestern universities of Bremen and Oldenburg carry out projects in the areas of social sciences in a broad sense. Researchers from political and legal sciences, sociology, business and economics as well as other social sciences are actively building a research space, together with leaders of junior research groups that are recruited at national and international levels. ZenTra is focused on having internationally visible interdisciplinary research projects on the topic of transnational studies.
